nown for its breathtaking wilderness and, perhaps more famously, for its potatoes, Idaho is home to a fast-growing wine industry and fantastic wines. Nestled between the Rocky Mountains and the Snake River, Idaho wine regions nurture the grapes with a moderate climate, limited precipitation, and a consistent growing season, which adds complexity to the grapes.

The characteristically cold winters allow vines to go dormant gradually while ridding the plants of bugs and discouraging disease. A combination of cold nights and hot days serves to balance acids and sugars. The limited amount of rainfall allows growers to control water through irrigation.

Idaho is known for growing and producing classic varieties including Syrah, Merlot, Riesling and Chardonnay, along with more adventurous wines such as Tempranillo and Malbec.

Idaho's WINE ROOTS

OVER 160 YEARS IN THE MAKING

Idaho is considered, by some, part of the new frontier of wine-growing areas of the United States. However, some of the first grapes planted in the Pacific Northwest were actually grown in Lewiston in the 1860s.

EAGLE SOUTHWESTERN IDAHO WINE REGION

he Eagle Foothills American Viticultural Area (AVA), established on December 28, 2015, encompasses 49,815 acres with 100 acres planted currently. This sub-AVA of the larger Snake River Valley AVA is the only one located completely within the state of Idaho. Nestled in the footbills north of Eagle, Idaho, the slope and aspect of the Eagle Foothills play an important role in sunlight reception, cold air drainage, frost and wind protection. The unique granitic soils and local climate of this area contribute to the making of excellent wines.
